Villas available on Paradise Beach

White sand beach in a protected cove...

A new road has opened one of the best land opportunities we've ever seen. Tax havens are a phenomenon in the first place, but to find one still in development stages and that has some of the best trust protection laws in existence seems almost unbelievable.

Until now a steep island mountain kept this Paradise Beach from being developed. Recently the St. Kitts government decided to open things up. They blasted a new highway through the middle of the mountain making the beach area available to developers. Because the area is so new (and undiscovered) these villas are going for fantastically low rates. In close proximity to these villas there will be two hotels and other amenities constructed in the near future. There is also a planned ferry landing for the same bay.

This is phenomenal. We think its the next best earthly thing to heaven itself.

This is ideal retirement property or a great home away from home. And if you own there, you can gain dual citizenship with ease—a sure advantage to banking offshore because you can get a second passport as well.

This information is for trust administrators only. We're not selling the land ourselves, but we can send you to the people who will help offshore trusts invest in this valuable land. We're buying there while the prices are still good for investment returns. Twenty percent returns are almost a certainty at this stage—there's only so much beach like this left in the world and we expect it to go extremely fast. Can you imagine a better place to have a second home?

Results from our survey...

Fully 98% of our survey brought positive praise for the value of our service. Only 2% of our customers pointed out difficulties they were having. We thank them for their honesty as it helps us correct and forward in our ongoing efforts to help people around the world in their search for legacy protection.

"I very much appreciate the fact that you've been able to help me overcome years of struggle with my holdings, trying to protect them, paying taxes and all that. I don't mind paying taxes, and you've shown me that I can do that, but that I can have more control in where the money goes. Thanks, it means a lot." —VA

"Your service has been great and ought to be made available to more people. Is there any way we can help other people find this kind of help?" —JP

"My father always had our family's assets held in trust. I grew up this way and always felt that his decisions regarding money were solid and wise. It wasn't until we saw what could happen with a living trust that we began to wonder how things had changed. Thank you, Bill, for exposing us to the truth and for showing us the way to moving assets offshore. It's pretty hard to calculate what we've gained because it's necessarily in terms of what we would have lost had we stayed doing things the old way. My dad was right, but the system changed. Now you've shown us how we can live under the same principles he taught us with the sure protection of being offshore." —SC

"It's a matter of jurisdiction, isn't it? We've never really cared much about what other people think. Whether we look like we own a lot or not, doesn't matter to either my husband or me. But we both care deeply about how our children will feel and about what we can safely leave behind for them. When you showed us how an offshore trust protects by assignment the control of the property, it came on both of us like a fresh breath of air. We honestly haven't felt this secure about our estate in years. In fact, it seemed like the more we built it, the more we had to be concerned about, and that just kind of took the fun out of it for along time, especially for M---. Now we can both breathe easily, knowing our children will stay in control of what is rightfully theirs." —FT

"Thank you for sending out your survey. I have a lot to say and really don't have space here. Sure, there's been some doubts and some minor confusion but as we learned more, all that got put to rest. Now we're just utterly thankful that a friend of ours brought you to us, utterly thankful. —HT

Low Profile Wealth Means Security

If you were in a war, fighting with guns, would you stand up on a ridge and make yourself visible so that your enemy could zero in on you?

Of course not. Yet incredibly, that's exactly what many newcomers to the tax havens do. Tax havens are powerful economic centers because they protect the privacy of those fortunate enough to learn how to use them.

In today's tough economic environment it is literally dangerous to flaunt wealth. Your enemy may not be who you imagine him to be. Your enemy can be someone else's litigation attorney. Or it can be someone of lesser wealth who'd like to get yours without earning it. Your enemy can even be your government, we're sad to say, but every day both the American and Canadian governments confiscate or deplete personal legacies cold-heartedly. It can happen to you.

To protect yourself against legal thievery and the greed of others, you send ownership of assets offshore. That's what tax havens are all about. That's why they're called havens. They are property harbors where ownership is protected by virtue of its displacement outside jurisdictional powers.

The immutable law is that if you have VISIBLE WEALTH, you are a visible target.

The only sure way to protect yourself is to render your wealth to a form that's invisible. If you don't take the steps now, you might as well walk out on the monetary ridge and raise your hands up so they can hit you more easily because going unprotected with visible wealth is assuring yourself that the scope of the enemy is zeroing in on your assets and they'll take it whenever they can.

We've seen too many victims. So have you. Act now. Go for rock-solid structuring that ensures your privacy.

Beware the "Get Rich Quick"

The more you learn about banking offshore and about how to preserve your money through complex business structuring, the more you realize that there are no get rich quick schemes that have any real salt.

Wealth isn't a matter of what you can pull over on someone else. Wealth is a matter of pragmatic wise decision-making that takes place over the course of time. It's true that some things pay off better and faster than other things, you especially learn that offshore.

Returns offshore by and large are much greater and they're added to by the fact that money made offshore and kept offshore is not taxable money if the structuring vehicle is set up correctly and used properly. Still the accrual of wealth is a matter of hard-work, clear thinking, research, creativity, and certainly personal sacrifice.

If wisdom is something you want in your financial world then the rule of thumb is this: if something looks or sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Greed always bites at such opportunities and greed, of course will spoil your returns.

Always investigate the source of the promise. That's key number one. Here are five more keys that should help you decide where trust moneys ought to go:

- 1) be cautious of schemes that ask members to spend a lot of money up front.
- 2) avoid schemes where major profits come from recruitment of others,
- 3) be cautious of offerings of unrealistically high earnings,
- 4) be cautious if steps are not clear
- 5) make sure there's a valid contract beforehand.

Use Our Fax-On-Demand Numbers

Every month we publish the following Fax-On-Demand numbers so that you can share them with friends and contacts. This is a very good way to introduce them to the world of complex business organizations and structuring offshore. Please use them.

Fax-On-Demand requires you dial from a voice-capable fax machine. Call (281) 890-2360 and follow the prompts. At the appropriate time, request document number 744. Then have them re-dial (281) 890-2360 and request document number 763.

We also have a special Fax-On-Demand number for Canadians. It is 281-890-3370. Canadians, please request document number 133.

If either of these lines ring without an answer, simply wait a few minutes and dial again. No answer means the line is busy and it will likely open up soon. — Tim

Nigerian Sharks

If you're avidly using the Internet be aware of a huge fraud that's crept into the UK from Nigeria. Like a true temptation, this scheme came into Britain looking very attractive, but has taken more than £3.5 billion from unwary British investors.

Now that the perpetrators have learned to use the Internet, the amounts may become incalculable. We've seen the same fraud in the United States coming from Nigeria by letter.

The fraud generally comes as an unsolicited letter from a purported West African company offering unrealistic profits. The one we saw was in fact from a supposed Nigerian firm. Usually they want you to release bank account information where upon they empty your account.

Trust administrators need to be particularly cautious of this kind of offering and stay away from anything from Nigeria. — Bill

Another Shark in the Sea

The reputable international firm, Overseas Company Registration Agents (OCRA) has announced that an American firm, International Attorneys SA, out of Las Vegas, Nevada is using their trademark OCRA and OCRA WORLD-WIDE to attract business to themselves.

The real OCRA is a major provider of offshore company formation and management services and has nothing to do with the International Attorneys SA operation.

The real OCRA says the Las Vegas firm is also mimicking their website with a remarkably similar address to that of the original OCRA

Just last year, Seychelles International Business Authority revoked International Attorneys SA's license for failure to fulfill obligations promised under its contracts. This action alone gives the real OCRA great cause for concern as many people may confuse the two.

To be sure you are dealing with the real OCRA in responding to any attractive advertising using this acronym, write or call for verification to this address:

OCRA, Companies House
Tower Street, Ramsey
Isle of Man IM99 4AN
United Kingdom

Tele +44 1624 815544
FAX +44 1624 817082.

As with the Nigerian fraud on the left, always investigate the source of an offer if you are administering funds from a trust. There are innumerable ways to check up on things. We don't have all the answers at Administrative Service, but we're always pleased to point you in a direction. If nothing else, search out and check references. There are lots of sharks in the sea swimming around trying to find easy targets. Don't be one by being too eager. — Bill

Paradise Beach

Our recent trip to Nevis West Indies left me with the most perfect memory. Here's what we found. The most beautiful beach I have ever seen!

This is a place where anyone would have their home. And the land is amazingly affordable as this area of the Carribean has hardly been found.

The property we are negotiating will have 1/3 acre home sites right above Paradise Beach with it's sprawling, beautiful, white sand.

These home sites will have water, electricity and septic systems available along with paved streets and most certainly one of the most beautiful sites in all of the Carribean.

For anyone who wants to know more about this exciting home opportunity, or home away from home, give me a call. I'll be happy to tell you all about it. — Terry

In All Fairness to Our Producers

We give commission benefits to those who sell trusts for us, because we don't advertise. As most of you know, this is a referral-only business.

Therefore, in fairness to those who perform for us by consistently bringing clients our way, we are dropping commission benefits to all those who do not sell at least one trust package over any given three-month period. — Mary

NOTICE

No U.S. citizen or Canadian citizen can invest in any of the investments mentioned—only offshore trusts and International Business Corporations (IBC's) are allowed to do so.

The New Bank

As most of you are now aware, we've been in the process of acquiring a new bank offshore. This will soon be open for deposits from trusts and IBC's.

All trust and IBC revenues placed in deposit in this bank will be distributed according to the direction of the trust administrator or officers of the particular IBC.

This is not a bank in which we will allow any U.S. or Canadian citizen to have an account. That's not the purpose of it. This new offshore bank is for trusts and IBC's only.

Deep Pocket Theory

The way American and Canadian courts are working these days, if you've got the money, you're a potential hit for someone's successful litigation. There can be no doubt there's a growing cultural acceptance to the idea of suing someone over anything and this growing acceptance places the wealthy in sure jeopardy.

The most unscrupulous persons (sometimes they are the litigating attorneys) can simply select wealthy or affluent targets, make speculative claims or spurious allegations and the lucrative battle begins. It can be nothing more than an allusion to grievances or some exaggerated claim, maybe non-existent in reality and the lawsuit is underway. Anybody can sue anybody, but the wealthy are set apart like sitting ducks.

It's a litigation lottery and the wealthy are the funders, who must pay out to defend themselves or be found guilty by default, or worse yet face heavy fines.

This is why offshore structuring of assets is critically important for those who have gained wealth. Put the ownership offshore. — Morey

How To Be Invisible

Remember the tail of the invisible man? Now days, it's not a bad idea at all. Only the real tale is the story of how to manage not being targeted.

Here are some fine pointers on ways you can remain invisible and still function as a happy human being:

- 1) Don't set yourself apart from the crowd. Look, act and dress like a normal human being within the culture you are frequenting. Vanity is the only thing that keeps you from being a chameleon.
- 2) Dress down. Take on the look of moderate success. Put your wealth offshore and don't flaunt it. Be humble, not arrogant. Fade into the scenery and give the center stage to someone else. You'll enjoy life a lot more.
- 3) Avoid the use of "gold" credit cards. They only point to your financial status. Lesser valued cards are just as worthy of paying for something. The only reason someone uses a gold card is to flaunt their status.
- 4) Stay away from top-of-the-line automobiles. It's like driving around in a red flag. There are bureaucrats who will actually take note and launch investigations just on the sight of affluences, so don't give them something to look at.
- 5) Don't allow yourself to be flamboyant with money (or anything) because this is like firing a flare into the night sky saying, "Here I am! Don't I look wealthy!" You'll attract litigators and tax collectors alike by being flamboyant.
- 6) Stay out of the media all you can. We've all seen how the media like to exploit. They can be like paranas in the water. The smell of money is the smell of scandal even where there is no scandal. The best publicity is no publicity.
- 7) Keep your mouth shut. Don't brag about what you "own" or "have". Let the ownership reside offshore. You've got control if you're set up properly and control is all you really need. Likewise, don't brag about control, just exercise it. — John

Guard Your Laptop

The Computer Institute reports that 57% of the high-tech crimes claimed by businesses and entrepreneurs occurred as a result of stolen laptop computers. Your laptop carries more value for thieves in what it contains than in what it can do as a computing machine. The value is not generally in the idea that someone can sell it to a pawn shop—the value is in what it contains. Guard your laptop and carry it's contents separately when it's not in use.

One insurance company reports that one in every four laptops they insured was stolen from its insured owner. This horrendous ratio is up by nearly 40% over last year. One might suppose that thieves have learned something about the value literally found "in" laptops.

Ten percent of these thefts take place in airports. You might try chaining this invaluable instrument to your wrist. It's not foolish, it could be incredibly wise. By all means carry your important documents separately in disc or hard-disc form.

Be $ensible

Never deposit more than $10,000 at anyone time. It's a red flag. Likewise be very cautious about making a series of deposits just under the $10,000 mark. That flag is just as red. If you did neither of those, what would you do? Vary the amounts of deposits considerably and place them more randomly if you want to go unnoticed. Never tell a teller offshore, "It's not from drug money,"—they'll assume it might be. Never inquire with an offshore bank about their policies and limitations before you've done your paperwork with them—that's grounds for suspicious activity. Just pick a reputable bank and open your account. Let them tell you.

Legal Asset Protection Services

We are pleased to bring a new service to you in the form of a law firm called Legal Asset Protection Services (LAPS). LAPS was created by its founders in connection with an Arizona LLC law firm to provide members with legal assistance in the event of an IRS audit.

LAPS has an extensive law background and a thorough understanding of the tax code. They also specialize in both domestic and international asset protection.

We are very pleased to have such a law firm with several attorneys attached throughout the country—available to our customers in the event of an audit.

Please note LAPS is independent from Administrative Service, Ltd., and like our accountants, tax attorneys and bankers, the firm requires a retainer for services separate from any fees paid to Administrative Service.

Most importantly, LAPS represents our on-going effort to provide our customers with top-quality professional representation. We believe affairs should always be handled by professionals most suited to the cause and LAPS is such. Call 406-265-6353 or FAX 406-265-1249.

Cal, our liaison for LAPS, says, "This law firm is very reputable and accomplished in this area. They are extremely knowledgeable about international law and have a thorough working knowledge of U.S. tax codes and law as well.

"One of the primaries in this firm actually travels and teaches this area of law and so we feel they are very competent to represent our customers.

"Unlike what you find in so many law firms, these people are also very personable and friendly, showing genuine interest and attention to individuals they represent. They understand the stress involved in an audit situation and have developed a relational pattern that helps dispell the tention normally found in this kind of circumstance.

"Largely because of their teaching, they've also developed good contacts with other competent tax attorneys all around the country and this naturally provides a real sense of back-up in more difficult cases. We searched all over the country for these guys and truly feel we've found the very best."

Use Our Professionals

Got tax problems? Let us put you with our expert accountants. We have built up a whole reserve of them and we checked them out and their good! If you've fallen into a financial mud-puddle, these guys know what to do to get you out.

We've long advised that you utilize the expertise of professionals wherever and whenever you can, but especially when you are involved in areas where your understanding and knowledge are young and tender.

We have a whole team of experienced X-IRS agents and lawyers experienced in legally handling offshore matters and solving onshore problems.

We have bankers who know what banking is offshore and who will protect you where you need protection. And we can link you up with investment brokers offshore who really know their stuff.

We can't guarantee anything, but we can put you with professional people who have proven their integrity and who have a true track record of their performance on behalf of other people.

We're a collection of good people whose sole aim is to help others save their legacies, grow true wealth and find true freedom. How can I be more clear that we are here to serve you and that it's not just me, not just one guy who knows it all.

— Bill

Airport Cautions

Airports around the world have become increasingly the hunting grounds of sophisticated thieves. If you look wealthy, you're being watched or noted. Count on it. If you're carrying a laptop, you'll be followed if there's a thief present. So follow these cautions:

- 1) Extra vigilance is essential, especially in busier airports. Use locking cables and alarms. Fight high-tech thievery with high-tech.
- 2) Minimize access with passwords, security software and file backup services.
- 3) When placing your laptop on the conveyor belt at the security check, stay with it and watch the people on the otherside carefully. If traveling with a companion, have them go through first and pick up your laptop as soon as it clears the X-ray detector.
- 4) Wait for your laptop to enter the X-Ray detector before going through the metal detector yourself. If you set it off, demand that a member of the airport staff safeguards your laptop while you go back through.

Danger In Biometrics

It sounds great. Think of being able to unlock your front door by simply smiling into a door-side camera, pressing a pad with your hand or simply saying, "Hi house, it's me." Biometrics is high tech, identifying an individual by measurable characteristics, the scanning of an eye, for instance to authenticate a persons identity.

The danger comes from the possibility of corruption behind the technology. Government agencies could contrive ways to gain access to private databases by manipulating the technology. For example, biometrics are already used to implant computer chips into wild animals so biologists can track their movements. Think

IF YOU LEAVE A MESSAGE...

Our American-based office receives upwards of 100 telephone calls per day. Bill, of course, is our primary responder to questions and sometimes spends considerable time with new customers who have previously watched the video but need more explanation due to their individual circumstances.

If you call and are not able to get through, it's because the phone is in use. We're ALWAYS here unless you are notified otherwise. For this reason, when you leave a message, make it VERY SHORT: name, phone number and a brief statement of why you called. We'll call back. We just can't listen to long messages and don't. SHORT MESSAGES—PLEASE!

Think of it this way: if you leave a long, detailed message about your woe or your circumstances, you are setting yourself up for an invasion of privacy. Bill is not the only one who receives messages. Keep your privacy private by just leaving your name and phone number, asking for a return call. We'll call you back. We call everybody back, every time.

On the other end of this problem, if you have a list of questions, we prefer that you write them out and fax them to Bill's attention (or Terry if it's about banking) ON OUR SECURE FAX line. We control who receives these fax transactions for the sake of protecting the privacy of our customers.

about it. A great deal of thought is going into how to track the average person using other variations of biometrics. Meanwhile the technology is in fact incredible and can be very useful in areas of privacy and security, so we'll see what comes about.

Hopefully, the technology will continue to move out in front of corrupt bureaucrats more bent on hindering your freedom than anything else.

— Terry

Awareness of the Y2K Problem

USA Today recently published an alarming report that bares truth about the upcoming dangers of poor handling on the part of the government and U.S. banks regarding the Y2K computer glitch that could crash the economy at the turn of the century.

The article stated, "The Federal government continues to fail to resolve the Year 2000 computer glitch" and that such failure has prompted aggressive oratory from a number of quarters.

We believe the article is understated, because American banks are guilty of the same nightmarish oversight. With barely a year to go, there's just not enough time for solving of this immense problem. Any innovations, of course, have to be tested and retested before the awesome hour of "financial doom" arrives, because when the clock turns on that eventful New Century Eve, most of these mainline computers will be incapable of recognizing the year 2000. They will see only the digits "00" and massive amounts of data will be lost. Good intenders have acted too late.

Magazines and newspapers around the world are filled with discussions about this difficulty, even books have been published about it. Of course, Internet users are wise to it, but the inept foot-dragging on the part of bureaucrats and banking officials (domestic) has set us all up for a major fall.

There's nothing better for you to do than structure yourself offshore. Move assets and revenues offshore as much and wherever possible as soon as possible. Our banks, as with many of the tax haven banks are already set and tested to handle this change of year and there are likely to be few if any consequences.

The worst thing you can do is to act like the domestic bankers and government bureaucrats and that is to act is if nothing bad's going to happen. It will. It has been acknowledged by computer experts worldwide.

We urge you, if you are not protected, to get on with it and protect yourself. There always those who do, those who will and there are always those who won't, who don't. Through us, you've got a whole list of professionals who can help you accomplish amazing things to safeguard your legacies in the coming times.

Why wait? — Dwayne

Where The Money's At

We received a report recently that ranked the top banking centers around the world. Ranked by deposits made and other liabilities pertinent to banking, the figures were rounded in billions of dollars and pertained to information analyzed as of September of 1997.

The analysis provides some interesting insights we thought you might like to see. Ranked in order, the top ten are as follows:

1. United Kingdom	$1,637 billion
2. United States	931 billion
3. Hong Kong	826 billion
4. Japan	698 billion
5. Germany	629 billion
6. France	628 billion
7. Singapore	473 billion
8. Cayman Islands	461 billion
9. Switzerland	406 billion
10. Luxumberg	362 billion.

We find it interesting that the Cayman Islands, little more than 35 miles across registers more than half the amount money deposited in the U.S. and outperforms the age-old Switzerland. We predict upcoming aggressiveness toward the Caymans regarding banking privacy will send money running to better protected areas like Nevis. Careful analysis of these figures reveals a lot. — Bill

Some Offshore Common Sense

Want to increase your wealth? Here are some ideas that can be easily employed in your daily approach:

1) Keep your money and the ownership of assets in the safest places in the world, where privacy is guaranteed by law and jurisdiction is your protection.

2) Investigate the full details of different tax havens, especially looking into the existing or impending tax treaties with your parent country. We do this and we believe we've found the best protection available.

3) Look offshore for the fastest growing stock markets in the world where dividends are high and commissions paid-out are minimal. It's the place to truly cash in.

4) Use an offshore credit card that's good anywhere in the world where credit cards are accepted. As a trust administrator, you are an employee of the offshore trust or IBC whichever may be the case. Don't abuse this privilege and don't sign with your name. You are representing the trust and that should be evident in your use. Paper trails (once feared) are your pathway to proven status if managed properly.

5) Increase wealth in an offshore tax-free bank account. Most of the world's biggest corporations do this, so why can't you?

6) Mimic the world's most successful and influential entrepreneurs. Go offshore and learn to manage the affairs of a trust. That's what they do!

A Sure Way To Be Successful In Every Way

Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

Charity suffereth long, and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up.

Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil;

Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth;

Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

Charity never faileth: but whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away.

For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away.

When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things.

For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known.

And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity.
